

Reflections of N. Y. Chen

I am very honored to be selected as a member of the LSU Engineering Hall of Distinction.

I am particularly pleased th

rather unique research organization. It manages to recognize unusual talents and provides an environment in which novel concepts can take root. It is also blessed with a communicative research staff. All these qualities are necessary for good research.

Whatever success I may have with my professional career, I attribute my good fortune to having had my baptism in American education at LSU, continued education at MIT, and
