Dean's Report

The Faculty Senate has suggested an elected body for the Graduate Council and a possible compromise would be to have part appointed and part elected. Graduate Council members are appointed by the chancellor based on recommendations from the Provost Office, Graduate School Dean, and College Dean. Byerly suggested an ad hoc committee be formed with members from the Graduate Council and Faculty Senate Executive Committee. The ad hoc committee would discuss elected versus appointed or appointed only. Nardo suggested that faculty have a choice to recommend council members. Faculty could have input in the process, but not elected members. Culross indicated that each college has representation on the council. The Graduate Council is for the best interest of the Graduate School and not for specific colleges. McKillop noted that Faculty Senate's power is limited and faculty can be heard, but changes may not necessarily be made. She recommended a portion of the Faculty Senate serve as Graduate Council members or elected by the faculty and the elections be given to the chancellor. Byerly mentioned what the Graduate Council has done in the past has been given to other authorities on campus. For example, graduate faculty status is at the department level; new programs and degrees go through the Faculty Senate course and curricula committee. Rose stated that the Promotion and Tenure cases are confidential and wondered if it would be appropriate to have elected members on the council. Kelso noted that the council is an advisory committee to the dean. Matthews agrees as an advisory to the dean and that the dean makes the final decisions. Nardo mentioned that all colleges have a faculty advisory committee; therefore, she recommends one recommendation from the dean and one from the policy committee should be sent to the chancellor. Byerly will meet with Kevin Cope to discuss ideas.

Mark Zucker from the College of Art and Design passed away while teaching out of the country. The college is working to replace him on the Graduate Council.

Students earning doctoral degrees should have 1/3 of courses applied to the degree earned at LSU. Doctoral degree programs require a minimum of 54 hours which can include dissertation hours. Reeve noted any hours listed on the transcript will be part of the 54 hours. Last spring the council approved to change the wording from 3 years of fulltime coursework to 54 hours. The residency requirement is determined by the department. McKillop motioned to include the SACS 3.6.3 statement in the General Catalog, Lemieux seconded, and the motion was passed.

"At least one-third of credits toward a graduate or a post-baccalaureate professional degree are earned through instruction offered by the institution awarding the degree."

Approved theses and dissertations are published through the web. Often faculty and students request for the document to be removed or revised. Previously the Graduate Council discussed that removal or

LSU Ag Center Affiliate Faculty Status: Reeve noted that various groups are reviewing how to assimilate graduate faculty status since the Ag Center is a part of the LSU A&M campus. A faculty committee will review the Human Resources part to consolidate by March.

Plus and Minus Grading: Plus and minus grading has not been approved yet. The Provost received information from the Faculty Senate to review. If approved, it will need to be worked into the new system which will be implemented in two to three years.

New Business

Peterson's Test of English: Marina Pereira, Assistant Director of Undergraduate Admissions, presented information on the Peterson's Test of English (PTE). International students may take the IELTS instead of the TOEFL, which was previously approved by the Graduate Council for some students. PTE is a newer test for international students to take prior to being admitted. It has been on the market for four years. PTE is very popular in the Asian regions. PTE was evaluated as the best practices of the TOEFL and IELTS exams. ASH (Admissions, Standards, and Honors) Committee approved the PTE for undergraduates. The test was viewed by peer institutions. Based on a comparison to peer universities, the minimum for LSU is 59. The maximum score on the PTE is 90 and the lowest is 10. The TOEFL minimum for LSU is 79 and the range is 0-120. The IELTS minimum for LSU is 6.5 with the range being 0-9. The requirements for graduate students are the same as the undergraduates at LSU. TOEFL had security breaches resulting in testing changes. The testing was originally a paper test, then in 1997/1998 was a computer based but not connected to the internet. The answers were saved to the computer and then graded. The TOEFL is now through the internet, answers are saved, and are graded as a group. Scores are valid for 2 years. PTE is a computerized test with results within 4 days instead of weeks. Once an international student arrives to campus, the student will go through the ESL testing to read, write, and speak English. The PTE is only for admissions standards.

McKillop moved to add the Peterson's test to the list of approved testing for international students and delete the automatic admission from the policy. Culross seconded and motion was passed.
