About:

In her dissertation project, Cana develops and tests a new theoretical explanation for how social identity constrains foreign policy decision making. First developed within the rationalist framework, audience costs have become one